Module 4

Explanation

       When designing my sitemap and navigation page, I wanted them to be as simple as possible. For the sitemap, I did my sketch in an outline format because I thought it would be easier to read. It also made it easier for me to understand it when I had to make my diagram. As for the diagram themselves, I wanted them to look as professional and creative as possible without looking like a wild mess.

       The main thing I kept in mind while creating these were how I wanted my portfolio to look. I wanted to show off each skill that I had so I created a separate tab for each of them; Writing, Designing, Editing. Under each tab I want you to be able to see those things, as well as be able to click on them for the full rationale for each piece. I want my portfolio to focus on my skills and look as professional as possible, therefore I opted out of placing any extra-curricular activities, education, etc. If I created anything useful in my classes, extra-curricular activities, or internships, then I would credit it in my rationale of that specific piece. For my "About Me" page, I imagined that being on the home page, if I was able to keep it short enough, with quotes from teachers and other faculty members running across the bottom that can be clicked on to be enlarged. If what I want to put into my "About Me" section is longer than a medium sized paragraph, then it goes on a separate page, which is why I designed my diagrams in that way.